The Manchester High School website MHSRedline.com has been awarded an Award of Excellence for Educational Communications by the Connecticut Association of Boards of Education.

CABE is planning to attend a board of education meeting in Manchester soon to make a formal presentation.

“We are proud and flattered,” said Superintendent Matt Geary, who was principle of MHS when the school launched its newsy website in 2011. “This is especially exciting because our web site features contributions from so many people -- students, staff, the PTSA, even parents and alumni.”

Redline

MHSRedline attracts more than 25,000 visits weekly, and is the cornerstone of a communications network that includes eponymous Twitter, Facebook and Instagram accounts.

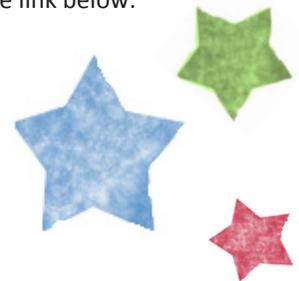

The district has recently expanded its footprint by creating MPSPride.org -- a website that features news from central office and all of the schools in the district.

CABE honored about a dozen districts overall in categories that included newsletters, budget documents and more.

Fairfield and Stamford were runners-up in the web site category.
